FESTIVAL of TREES

The 37th annual Festival of Trees celebration is scheduled to open Tuesday and continue through Friday. It will be held at the Shilo Inn Convention Center, 780 Lindsay Boulevard, Idaho Falls.

FESTIVAL OF TREES: A HOLIDAY TRADITION

Festival of Trees is planned and orchestrated by a committee of community volunteers. Over 500 folks pitch in to help out during the week, with about 80 kind souls involved year-round.

And the proceeds? All money raised will go to help the Festival of Trees' chosen charity, Development Workshop, Inc, and their work in helping those who are disabled or disadvantaged reach towards economic and social independence.

The Festival of Trees is a perfect opportunity to have fun and do good at the same time. After all, who doesn't love Christmas?

This year's theme, "Who Doesn't Love Christmas?", is based on Dr. Seuss'

"How the Grinch Stole Christmas." The festival will be a showplace of amazingly decorated trees (that you can bid on and take home), live entertainment, baked goods, craft boutiques, a raffle featuring themed baskets, and Mrs. Santa's Home Cooking Café (with a very special menu, including the festival's ever-favorite Famous Homemade Chicken Enchiladas). Santa Claus is coming too—and he will want to hear from all the kids (both young and old).

For more information, visit www.dwinc.org on the web (look under the "Events" tab) or call Amy at 524-1550. You and your family can help make a difference for someone who really needs your compassion, someone who really needs for you to care.
